Exploring the Percieved Self-Efficacy among Syrian Refugees in Istanbul - A Qualitative Research Study

Victor Dudas, PhD
Visiting Scholar at SRII

This study builds on data gathered from the research project Faith as support or burden: A study among Syrian refugees in Istanbul (FASB). The present study is focused on a center for Syrian refugees in Istanbul. This center, the Qnushyo, is managed by the refugees themselves with the help of international and Turkish volunteers. As such, the center is many ways a project of the Syrian community. At the center, a range of activities, or classes, are provided that are mainly focused on the children of the refugees, e.g., a school curriculum. Activities at the center also include language courses for the adults that take place during the evenings.
